To whom it may concern,

Upon graduating with a Bachelor's in Banking & Finance from Bangor University (UK) in 2016, I have managed to gain significant work experience from internship positions as well full-time positions in several companies and government agencies in Bahrain.

I first worked as an Administration and Finance Officer at Mena Chambers Law Firm, followed by two internship positions at Bahrain's Economic Development Board (EDB) – one in the Financial Services Department and the other in the Tourism, Leisure and Real Estate Department.

Towards the end of 2017, I started working at Gulf Researcher as a full-time Research Analyst, and over the ~3 years spent at this company I got promoted to a Senior Research Analyst and then later to my current position as a Research Manager. My job consists of conducting primary and secondary market research, as well as creating and submitting reports and presentations. The work is conducted in many sectors, ranging from tourism, destination management and entertainment to education, economics, and technology – which has essentially fostered great analytical skills that allow me to deep-dive into any topic, organizational skills that allow me to structure information in a concise manner and ultimately, the knowledge and understanding in many fields.

The university degree I have obtained and the various positions I have worked in over the years have given me the necessary skills and knowledge to be able to perform well in any position, and under various levels of stress.

Sincerely,

Noor Al Mukharreq
