

Dear Sirs,

Good day to you.

Despite the current given global crisis and difficult challenges which comes ahead with the Covid-19, I am currently looking for a new challenge and new career step. Therefore I would like to support your company in the area of logistic with my competence (independent working method, reliability, structure and organizational skills), assertiveness and persuasiveness. In the course of savings measures, numerous jobs will be cut at my current employer, LPL Projects + Logistics GmbH. Thanks to this fact, I can re-orient myself professionally. My employment ended on January 31st, 2020 and I am available now for any time to start a new career.

Since 2010 I have been working as a project manager in a responsible position in Saudi Arabia. I have not been only responsible for project management, but also for cost controlling and scheduling. I involve external service providers in projects and translate customer requests into concrete offers. I was the main contact and escalation person, internally and externally, during the project implementation. So cooperatively steer all project participants towards the common goal.

In my current job I can count on the experience of project planning for my previous employers. This knowledge allowed me to manage and optimize planning, implementation and cost processes, budgets and risks. You can find my job profile in my CV.

I speak business english fluently, like my mother tongue and have extensive knowledge in the field of logistics. I would be happy to convince you in a personal conversation that with me you will gain a committed and experienced employee.

I would be happy to be invited to a further discussion.

Sincerely yours
Sebastian Fromm
