Finance, as a field, always fascinated me right from my undergraduate college days. I believe that my penchant for this field stems from the fact that the passion for management Science runs with in my family since My father has a Finance and management degree which instigated my love to pursue such studies. I have always enjoyed pondering into areas that require problem solving of which I have shown excellent skills in solving matters, analytical and mathematical skills, and I am anxious to combine the knowledge of, and aptitude for, these skills with my interest in finance. My plans for the gained financial knowledge obtained from your respected university would be directed to implementing plans and skills to develop the industry in my country especially in field of corporate or managerial finance.

I wish to understand the broad theoretical foundation of management and more specifically the in-depth knowledge of the latest techniques of corporate management. I want to leverage my existing skills with the knowledge of corporate management to obtain a rigorous, demanding and rewarding position in this profession. The knowledge and skills in turn will help me to achieve my short-term career goals to manage capital, generate funds, perform mergers and acquisitions, and ensure future economic stability for corporation, or help management services industry make the right management decisions that will result in economic stability and high returns. In the long-term, such knowledge, skills and experience will help me assist Government of Bahrain in designing, implementing and monitoring management policies, planning and executing the financing initiatives, and interfacing with the economic community and investors. To this end, I would also like to gain knowledge in the fields of management analysis, management planning, strategic management, international finance and global financial markets during graduate studies in the France.

I held apprehensive thoughts towards my career prospects in Bahrain however, the kind of opportunities, challenges rewards and satisfaction that the studies in France offers are very reassuring. This inspired me to think and dream about higher studies in your university realized that this is just the beginning of a greater dream.

Therefore I look forward to the selection and admission committees to turn my passion into concrete abilities not just acquire a foundation of knowledge about how the Management works but also what is its pragmatic aspect.

Yours respectfully
